GDPR

The General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) that was passed in 2016 became enforceable on 25 May 2018. The legislation strengthens the use of data and its security in order to enhance your privacy rights. This is a brief overview of some of the processes the Faculty of Classics adopts to ensure your data is used appropriately.

If you make an application for the OxLAT scheme the Faculty of Classics at the University of Oxford will use your data for (a) the purposes of participant selection and (b) internal monitoring and reporting and the evaluation of the impact of our outreach activities and whether they are meeting our intended targets. Your/your child's data will not be disclosed to any third parties.

We will only retain data about you/your child if your application to the scheme is successful. Some of this information is necessary for the successful running of the scheme (i.e. medical conditions, dietary requirements, details of any SEND adjustments you/your child may require) but other information will be retained for a specific length of time that enables us to accurately track you through the higher education process. (i.e. your address or email). for research purposes.

If your/your child's application is not successful your data will not be retained.
